Hello again:

I would like to see Microsoft made to offer free to all current Microsoft operating systems all of the preceding operating systems that the current one obsoleted.

This is so that the excellent software that was not financially successful for the owners could continue to operate for the users of the operating systems that need to upgrade to the most recent version for other reasons, like keeping current with financially successful software companies newest versions.

I believe that versions like DOS, WIN 3.1, WIN 95 and even WIN 98 could be classified as free to current owners of WIN ME, 2000 and later.

What do you think?

When I gave the idea for WINDOWS to the UNITED NATIONS in 1979 and suggested that Bill Gates should develop it, that was FOR the WORLD. Not for Bill Gates personal fortune!

He has turned into a greedy!
He was given the idea. He needs to give back!

Very TRULY yours,
Bernard Solomon Katz
